Customer Solutions In Value-Added Selling Chuck Reaves 16:13

The purpose of this course is to teach you one of the pivotal concepts in value-added selling: the importance of solving the customer's problems. To be successful, we must position ourselves as problem-solvers. It's time to let go of sales techniques that give the impression that we're trying to solve our own problems. In fact, as we begin to focus on our customer's problems, our own problems are usually solved in the process. As a result of this program, you should be able to: Fully understand how critical it is to be perceived as a problem-solver; Improve client retention through our ability to solve problems; Clearly identify customer problems; and Quantify the customer's problems.

Customers For Life	Brian Tracy	26:42
A direct sale on a commercial customer today costs more than $400 in terms of time, travel, advertising, generating leads and expenditures. Acquiring a customer at this cost, can put a company out of business unless that customer buys again and again. The very best salespeople, and the very best companies, implement strategies to acquire customers and keep them for life. Your goal must be to develop long-term customer relationships, and then to hold on to them in the face of ever more aggressive competition. When you install a customer acquisition and retention strategy, you do more to build and maintain long-term customer relationships than ever before. This course will teach you how to get "customers for life."

Keepers For Life – Winning the Inner Game of Change – Vol. 3	Terry Paulson	13:23
Ways to manage yourself before you ever lead others through change...
Key Accounts	Brian Tracy	14:12
The much used 80/20 rule tells us that as much as 80% of a company's revenues can come from as little as 20% of its clients. One of your responsibilities as a sales manager is to strategize with your salespeople in regard to those clients. You must have a plan to develop, penetrate and keep key accounts. This course will focus on your role in planning and strategizing. In major account selling, it's the quality of strategy as well as the quality of the call that counts. By the end of this course, you will learn: The difference between key accounts and smaller accounts; Rules with regard to strategy; Ideas in key account planning; and The advantages of strategic coaching.
Leadership Styles	Brian Tracy	25:08
Leadership is a key factor in your success or failure. The style of leadership you use depends on factors like the maturity and personality of your subordinates or the type of decision under discussion. Learn the appropriate leadership styles for maximum results. You will learn: decision-making styles; leadership qualities; personality styles of your subordinates; and when to use different leadership approaches.

Leadership Wisdom for Lifelong Success

Robin Sharma

65:43

Robin Sharma teaches you the Rituals of Visionary Leaders. Based on his bestseller "Leadership Wisdom from the Monk Who Sold His Ferrari", this course is a great way to learn cutting-edge strategies for real success in both business and in life.

Leading The Action

Brian Tracy

18:07

As a sales manager, you must stimulate emotions. A simple but easy way to distinguish leadership from management is to measure emotions. Are your people excited and are they striving to achieve something great? Leadership is the critical difference. To get extraordinary results from ordinary people requires leadership – "the ability to get followers." You must break new ground, chart new seas, and be a role model for innovation and success. By the end of this course, you will learn: Facts to incorporate regarding to people; Seven key qualities of sales leadership; and Principles of sales management.

Leveraging Your Potential

Brian Tracy

24:58

As you look around, you find that successful people are those who make a habit of doing the things that unsuccessful people don't like to do. When you begin making a habit of engaging in the behaviors that will give you the leverage you want to move ahead more rapidly, you will enjoy success that evades most people. You will learn: Why some people earn ten times as much as others; How to be lucky; Seven leverage factors; How to network, continually, with people who can help you; and To develop good work habits.

Lighten Up!

C.W. Metcalf

37:48

Do you realize that achieving success can be fun? Humor is an essential survival skill that results from an open attitude and not taking yourself too seriously. Lighten Up can help you look at adversity in a new light. National humorist, C. W. Metcalf, shares humor tips through his personal stories, Humaerobic exercises, and humor tools. He discusses his philosophies on competition, bringing play to the workplace, and the benefits of developing, nourishing, and sustaining a sense of humor. You will learn how to: Take yourself lightly and your job seriously; Stay light physically and mentally; Realize business is not a battlefield; and Use Humaerobics to deal with adversity.

Listening In Value Added Selling

Chuck Reaves

27:45

The purpose of this course is to teach you how asking the right questions of your customers, and then listening carefully to the responses, can make you more successful. The most important thing you can learn from a customer is their buying criteria. You can only learn this by asking key questions, and then listening to their responses. You will use those same responses to show the customer why he/she should buy from you. As a result of this program, you should be able to: Open up channels of communication between you and your customers that have not been opened before; Incorporate advanced questioning techniques in your sales contacts; and Determine the customer's buying criteria through your effective use of questions.

Listening Is Number One

The LearnCom Group

23:12

It seems simple enough, but oftentimes we forget to listen. Join communications expert Ed Brodow as he describes six high-performance steps for developing prudent listening and true undivided attention. Beginning with rule number one, Ed encourages ways to develop your desire to listen. He continues by explaining how open-ended questions help you filter through cluttering distractions. You will learn how to: Focus on the other person; Become more objective to the conversation; Listen in a way that lets others know you're listening; and Take nonverbal hints and hear what is not being said.

Managing and Leading

Brian Tracy

16:25

Your job as a sales manager is to extract extraordinary results from ordinary people. You must be a manager and a leader. To be effective, your image of yourself must be that of a manager, not a super salesperson. You now have new skills to learn or reinforce. The tools you use to define success are different. This course will address critical success factors and core competencies required to be a leading sales manager. By the end of this course, you will learn: Key changes to make in your self-image; Seven management tools; Key management tasks; and Three requirements to fulfilling promise and potential.

Managing Change Effectively

Brian Tracy

25:20

Learn how to be a creator of circumstance rather than a creature of circumstance. High-performance people are masters of change not victims of change. Don't wait for things to happen, make them happen! You will learn: How to have a "sense of control"; Flexibility; Zero-based thinking; The Theory of constraints; How to eliminate worrying; Major reasons for stress; and How to accept 100% responsibility for your life.

Managers will learn about the powerful benefits of encouraging communication, soliciting suggestions, developing trust and confidence, encouraging creativity, and providing rewards and recognition.

Negotiating Skills Brian Tracy 26:05

Your ability to negotiate well on your own behalf is the key to your success in almost every area of life. Negotiating is a skill like riding a bicycle or typing with a typewriter. You can learn it as a result of continual practice. You negotiate every day in every way. From the time you are young, throughout all of your interactions with others, you are continually negotiating for advantage. The only difference between people is that some are good at negotiating and some are not.

Negotiating The Sale Brian Tracy 26:21

Your ability to negotiate well in your own behalf, both in selling and in personal life, is essential to your getting the very best prices, terms and deals that are available to you. People who do not like to negotiate are people who are simply not very good at negotiating. Negotiating is a skill, like riding a bicycle, that can be learned by study and practice. You can become an excellent negotiator if you really want to. Your ability to negotiate well for yourself and your company can make an enormous difference in the quality of your sales and the degree of profitability they contain for your organization.

Negotiating With Foreigners Roger Dawson 15:10

Cultural biases can place hurdles between you and finishing the deal. National and cultural heritages greatly impact attitudes toward and understandings of negotiations and the nature of "the deal." Many foreigners enter into negotiations with nine preconceived characteristics of the typical American. Recognize these stereotypes and address or dispel them in your negotiations. Gaining an appreciation of cultural predispositions will guide your negotiations to positive ends.

Optimizing Customer Value The LearnCom Group 15:56

In this video, Dr. Richard Chang explains ways your organization can enhance its quality to service customers better and improve the value your customers receive. Customer Value Drivers will be shared to teach you to go beyond satisfaction with your customers and to increase the perceived value of your products and services.

Overcoming Objections Brian Tracy 26:26

Customers today are bombarded by hundreds, and even thousands, of commercial messages. They are skeptical, suspicious and careful with their time and money. No matter what you are selling, customers will have questions and concerns that you must resolve before you can proceed to a sale. In this session, you will learn some of the key ideas you need as part of your skill set for overcoming objections.

Overcoming Procrastination Brian Tracy 15:24

Separate the urgent from the important. Break the habit of procrastinating. Develop a "sense of urgency" with key tasks. Break jobs down into "do-able" pieces. Complete harder, high-value tasks first.

People Skills / Buyer Behavior Don Hutson 18:10

Your "behavioral style" reflects the comfort zone in which you behave and communicate. It is the pattern of actions others observe for describing your underlying behavior. The three behavioral dimensions which we will discuss are combined to form your personal profile. Understanding buyer behavior is critical to high-performance sales people.

Personal High-Performance, How To Get and Keep It Danny Cox 56:50

"This program is an in-depth, step-by-step system showing how you can achieve high-performance and maintain it. This surefire system was used by Danny Cox to ignite his undeveloped potential when he was failing. After his own "turnaround", this same innovative system was taught to his individual team members. Results? An incredible 800% increase in productivity. Records were smashed, not only in the company, but industry-wide. Topics discussed include: non-productive habits, determining and developing internal strengths, goal systems, and a high-performance plan.

Personal Power In Negotiating Roger Dawson 25:21

Wield your personal power to intimidate, influence or gain admiration in your power negotiating. Personal power can manifest itself in your negotiations in eight forms: legitimate, reward, coercive, reverent, charismatic, expertise, situation, and information. Learn to recognize the affects and perceptions of each distinct type of personal power in yourself and your adversaries, and you will avert intimidating negotiating situations and achieve desired results.

Personal Sales Planning Brian Tracy 25:59

Successful salespeople are better thinkers than average salespeople. The more accurate you are in thinking about yourself, your goals and the activities necessary to accomplish them, the more successful you will be in everything you attempt. In this course, you will learn how successful individuals accomplish far, far more than the average person, by planning their goals and activities in advance. The aim of personal strategic planning is for you to increase your "return on energy." Your mental, emotional and physical energy is all you really have to sell. The key to success has always been to "plan your work and work your plan!"

Personality Styles In Value Added Selling	Chuck Reaves	42:03
Have you ever wondered why people act the way they do? In this course, we will discuss the four behavioral styles and how you can sell more effectively to each of them. You will also learn how to use your own behavioral style more effectively. Companies don't do business with companies, people do business with people. Therefore, the more we can learn about managing people, the more successful we will be in sales. As a result of this course, you will be able to: Understand your selling style better; See yourself as others see you; Make better and more lasting impressions based on the customer's perspective; and Manage your sales time and efforts more effectively and efficiently.
Personally Responding to the Challenge of Change	Ivory Dorsey	38:36
This course addresses the need for personal accountability and risk during the challenge of change. Change is pervasive, consuming, emerging and does not respect people. If one is to survive and thrive during these competitive times, one's response to change must be personal and immediate. Taking a personal risk in pursuit of maximum performance is inescapable.
Philosophy of Time Management	Brian Tracy	15:24
The one thing that makes you unique from every other human being in the world is the way you think, especially how you think about your time and your life. If you think more effectively and constructively about all aspects of your life, you will actually improve them. In this session, you will learn the qualities of thinking of superior men and women and how you can develop and use them in your day-to-day life.
Planning and Organizing	Brian Tracy	15:21
Learn the essential key to high productivity. Organize yourself for maximum results. Deal with paper quickly and efficiently. Use the most reliable time management tools. Get more done in less time by knowing how to plan your work and work your plan.
Planning For Success	Brian Tracy	15:25
The primary job of the sales manager is to plan what must be done. A well-structured plan enables you to get the job done through others. It enables you to get results in an organized and predictable fashion. Your ability to plan your work, work your plan, and get your people to follow your plan like a well-conducted orchestra is essential to superior sales management. By the end of this course, you will learn: Three steps to planning; Four ways to project sales; How to analyze your market; and Eight keys to planning sales success.
Platinum Rule – Relationship Strategies	Tony Alessandra	35:54
Sometimes you encounter nice enough people, but you just don't hit it off. As a result, the chance for a business deal, partnership, or maybe even a friend is lost and shrugged off as just one of those things. The Platinum Rule will identify the four basic types of personalities: Directors, Socializers, Thinkers and Relators. This video will teach you the most effective ways to deal with each personality type and have better relationships with your customers, friends, and family.
Positioning In Value-Added Selling	Chuck Reaves	22:58
The purpose of this course is to give the participant techniques and ideas about how he/she can better position themselves with their clients. One of the important keys in value-added selling is controlling the customer's perception of our company, our company's products, and our salespeople. To a certain degree, the salesperson positions the entire industry with each encounter with every client. As a result of this course, the participant should be able to: Understand the various elements of positioning; Better control their positioning; Develop positioning techniques for every encounter with the customer; and Position their company higher in the customer's mind.
Post-Trade Show Follow-Up	Steve Miller	19:52
All your efforts before and at the show are wasted if you don't follow-up! This course helps you avoid the Post-Show trap, and includes Steve Miller's "Closed-Loop Follow-up System". The information contained in this course will help you use the Trade Show as a springboard for long-term relationships . . . and long-term business!
Power Negotiating – Angry Buyers, Win-Win, and Rules	Roger Dawson	25:40
Don't allow an angry buyer to steer your negotiation. By establishing criteria, exchanging information, and reaching for a compromise, you can transform a potentially explosive situation into a smooth negotiation. Mastering the angry buyer is made easier with this course's quick reference checklist of ways to foster win-win negotiations. All of your negotiations should fit within the framework of our four negotiating rules; the first and most consequential of which is, don't narrow the negotiation to one issue.
Power Negotiating – Buyer Styles	Roger Dawson	23:52
Effective power negotiators adapt to the personalities of their buyers. From two base dimensions of assertiveness and emotion, evolve four distinct buyer styles. This course identifies the pragmatic, extrovert, amiable and analytical buyers and their negotiating methods, faults, goals, relationships and methods. Once you have gained insight into the styles, use your learning to shift focus off of style biases toward the interests of the negotiation.
Power Negotiating – Higher Authority and Good Guy/Bad Guy	Roger Dawson	25:30
Negotiations often mean concealment. Unlike Western movies, the good guys and bad guys in negotiations don't wear white and black. This course teaches you to be aware of the possibility that you could be a pawn in a good guy/bad guy situation, and how you must react to maintain the integrity of your negotiation. You, too, will be in a position to conceal. Learn how keeping a low authority profile will give you additional consideration, time and protection against a premature decision.

Power Negotiating – Never Say Yes, Flinching and Reluctance Roger Dawson 25:51

If your negotiations have left you thinking "I could have done better" or "something must be wrong," perhaps you said yes too quickly. In addition to teaching you why you must never say yes in haste, this course will teach you the importance of flinching and reluctance during negotiations. Discover how physical posturing, such as your ability to react and to acknowledge reactions, will allow you to key in on acceptable negotiating ranges. Master the methods of reluctance when buying or selling, and you'll tip negotiating ranges in your favor.

Power Negotiating – Vise, Never Offer To Split the Difference, and Hot Potato Roger Dawson 25:08

Increase your bottom line with decisive and reactive power negotiating techniques. Learn how to employ the vise by demanding a better offer and suggesting a single, absolute solution. Force your adversaries to offer to split the difference, making them feel, after you reluctantly accept, that they have won. Confront "hot potatoes," such as insufficient budgets, with unswerving challenge statements. The bottom line is the dollar, not the percentage, and this course will help increase yours.

Power Negotiating Principles – Service Value, Trade–Off and Nibble Roger Dawson 25:56

"What can you do for me?" Asking this question will elevate the value of a trade–off in your negotiations. The trade–off principle of power negotiating transforms an apparent compromise into a valuable end. This course also stresses the principles of elevating your service value by establishing fee requirements in advance. Buyers may attempt to "nibble" for additional concessions once you've closed the deal. Learn how, at the most vulnerable point of your negotiation, the close, you can prevent the possibility of nibbling.

Pressures of Power Negotiating Roger Dawson 25:35

Time and money can be scarce resources in negotiations. At some point in your negotiation, you will have to assess if the time and money pressures warrant continued effort. One of your considerations may be the extent of your information power. This course outlines effective means of acquiring information power from admitting you don't know to selecting an environment conducive for obtaining information. With information power and time and money perspective in tow, you will be empowered with the confidence that you are able to walk away if desirable outcomes are not imminent.

Programming Yourself For Success	Brian Tracy	26:58
You always perform on the outside based on the way you are programmed on the inside. Because you have learned to be the person you are today, your future can be unlimited. You can unlearn old habits and learn new, positive habits of thought and behavior. A few key points: The Law of Correspondence; Programming your subconscious mind; Creating your desired mental equivalent; The difference between your conscious and subconscious minds; and The Law of Subconscious Activity.
Project A Positive Image With Power Talking Skills	George Walther	24:32
Whenever you evaluate and assess another person – and that's all the time – you pay attention to three factors: Their actions, their thoughts as revealed through their attitudes, and their specific words. Others are evaluating you, too, all the time. Of those three factors, which seems to be the most important in shaping your image: Words, thoughts, or actions? The answer is none, and all three. It's not necessary to think in terms of which factor is the most important, because all three are inextricably linked and influence each other. Our focus in this program is on the specific words and phrases you use in daily conversations. Your word choices influence how you're perceived, and also shape your attitude and thoughts. Word choices also impact your behavior and actions.
Prospecting Power	Brian Tracy	25:59
The most important part of selling is prospecting. The most successful salespeople have the most complete strategies and plans to develop the highest quality and quantity of prospects who can and will buy within a reasonable period of time. In this course, you will learn some of the most important ideas of prospecting and how you can apply them to your sales work to increase the number of sales you make, faster and easier than ever before.
Psychology of Selling – Ten Keys To Success	Brian Tracy	26:53
Selling is more mental than it is physical. 80% of your success in the field of selling will be based on the way you think and feel. What is going on inside you is going to largely determine how you behave on the outside. The greatest breakthrough in the study of human potential in the 20th century has been the understanding of the self-concept. How you think and feel inside precedes and predicts your levels of performance and effectiveness in everything you do. When you take full, complete control of your conscious mind, you take complete control of your feeling and your behavior as well. In this course, you learn the key elements of the "Psychology of Selling" and how to perform better in everything you do.
Pushing To The Front	Brian Tracy	20:56
Why are some people more successful in their careers than others? Why do some people grow and flourish, get promoted, move ahead rapidly and enjoy greater satisfaction in their lives and work? After many years of research and study, we finally have the answers to these questions. The starting point lies in our own thinking, our expectations of ourselves. You have the capacity of greatness in you. You, with desire and effort, can develop the "winning edges", the small marginal differences in competence that translate into enormous differences in results. By the end of this course, you will learn: Four mental laws; Seven ways to control your thinking; and How to participate in life-long learning.
Qualities of Top Salespeople	Brian Tracy	24:36
Millions of dollars and thousands of hours have been spent studying the top salespeople in every field, all around the world. Today, we know exactly who they are and how they think and feel about themselves and their work. When you begin to develop the same qualities, characteristics and thinking habits of the highest paid salespeople in your field, you will very soon begin to get the same sales results and earn the same kind of money. In this course, you will learn the qualities of top salespeople and how to incorporate them into everything you do.
Re-Thinking Motivation	Jim Cathcart	25:06

The old approach to motivating yourself and others was based on trying to change people. In today's changing world, there is significantly greater value to be found in optimizing one's existing natural strengths. Jim presents the latest on psychological and behavioral science research on motivation. This is based on the Acorn Principle: Finding your natural path for growth. Topics covered include: finding your natural smarts, isolating your core values, and optimizing your velocity.

Re-Thinking Sales

Jim Cathcart

24:40

This course covers the natural approach to selling – relationship sales. This natural approach to partnering with people in order to meet their needs is suited for any type of selling. Learn to become the preferred supplier and subject matter expert that your customer needs. Relationship selling has six simple steps, each with a clear goal in the integrated system, known as the sale. You will learn to identify each step and master your strengths related to it. You will also learn how to build trust and create a never-ending flow of business through rethinking sales.

Re-Thinking Service

Jim Cathcart

20:17

You must learn how to get people to provide great service. This course shows you how to build a loyal customer base with employees who enjoy taking care of customers. You'll learn how to structure "role agreements" to increase productivity and motivation. You will see the importance of learning how to think about what you do, and of helping others develop productive thinking. You will learn how to structure your organization as a living organism rather than a hierarchy, and to differentiate between upserving and upselling. You will also learn the characteristics of good customers and how to cultivate them in all you serve.

Recruiting Salespeople

Brian Tracy

16:13

One of the most important things you do is staffing. A critical talent is the ability to recruit, hire and build a team of effective, competent people. The best sales managers have the best staffs. The best staffs are a reflection of quality recruiting skills. Remember, you are working and accomplishing tasks through others. The quality of those others will have a direct bearing on the quality of work you produce and the opinion others have of you. By the end of this course, you will learn: How to use zero-based thinking; To build the profile of the ideal sales candidate; How to build an appropriate job description; and Some excellent sources of sales recruits.

Relationship Selling

Brian Tracy

26:13

The heart of the sale, today, is contained in the quality and quantity of relationships that you form with prospects and customers. The very best and most successful salespeople are those who are the most capable of entering into, and maintaining, the highest-quality relationships with people who can buy from them and recommend them to their friends and associates. In this course, you will learn the key elements of relationship selling and how you can apply them at every stage of your career.

Releasing The Human Dimension of Quality

Eileen McDargh

25:59

Far too many quality programs fail because more attention is paid to the technical aspects rather than the human aspects. As Lewis B. Mayer said, "The inventory goes home at night". This course explodes the myth of motivation and looks at how managers create three critical requisites for creating an environment conducive to high-performance. You will learn: How to identify management behaviors which encourage commitment; What today's employee seeks in a work environment; Examples of what some companies and individuals are doing to release human potential; and Why listening serves as the underpinning for improved performance.

Resolving Conflicts With Ease

Sandra Crowe

56:04

This course is designed to outline the successful elements of dealing with difficult people and situations of all types, whether they are customers or colleagues and to focus on eliminating barriers. They include: complainers, irate, unreasonable and irresponsible people, hostiles, and the passive aggressives who may either give too little or give too much information. This course will not only assist participants in moving through difficult situations, but do so with more ease, power, and strength so that employees feel confident in the process. Participants will learn: Guiding principles to deal with difficult people; Types of difficult people, and Modes of behavior.

Sales Meetings

Brian Tracy

18:45

As a manager, one quarter or more of your career will be spent in meetings. The purpose of this program is to show you how to manage and participate in meetings more effectively so that you get the maximum return on time invested in meeting with other people. As a manager, the way you conduct a meeting and the way you perform in a meeting is a major factor in your career success. By the end of this course, you will learn: Reasons for holding sales meetings; Six parts to planning sales meetings; The structure of sales meetings; and Ideas on holding better sales meetings.

Sales Persistence Strategies	Chuck Reaves	23:28
Is there a secret to success? In this course you will learn how to close even the most difficult sales. You will learn how to neutralize the stubborn gatekeeper. There is actually a better way to be persistent and there are rules for persistence. How do you go back when the customer has already rejected your ideas without sounding like a broken record? As a result of this course, you will be able to: Understand the value of persistence; Use new and varying techniques to go back into accounts; Determine additional opportunities for selling in your existing accounts; Expand your customer base; and Teach others how to benefit from the strength of using persistence.
Sales Presentations	Chuck Reaves	21:21
What type of presentation will you use on your next sales call? Does your next call have to be a face-to-face call or is there a better method? How do you know which type of call is most appropriate for each customer contact? In this course, we will discuss the advantages and disadvantages of each type of presentation. We will develop a process for you to use in determining which is best. As a result of this course, you will be able to: Understand the four types of presentations; Discern the advantages and disadvantages of each; Make better use of your sales resources to make more calls and close more sales; Modify the way you are currently using the four types of presentations; Use the sales call to differentiate yourself, your company and your product; and Penetrate accounts that have refused to see you.
Sales Supervision	Brian Tracy	25:46
This course focuses on the importance of field supervision and it's many benefits. You can not function as a sales manager without dedicating a good portion of your time to field supervision. Field supervision allows you to feel the pulse of the business. It's how you get closer to the salespeople and your customers. It's how you function as a role model to your salespeople and how you become a company representative to your customers. It's an important way to inspect what you expect. By the end of this course, you will learn: Requirements for direct supervision; Advantages of field supervision; The process of sales supervision; Procedures for sales calls; and Key roles of sales supervision.
Sales Training	Brian Tracy	15:47
"If you keep doing what you're doing, you'll keep getting what you're getting." This is an insightful quote, but the real world of business paints an even darker picture. You'll only keep getting what you're currently getting if the competition doesn't improve. We all know that isn't the case; the competition will improve. Training is the way you keep up with and outpace the competition. The quality of your sales team is a key source of competitive advantage. It may be the only sustainable competitive advantage you have. You must grow your people. Training is the way you grow your people. At the end of this course, you will learn: The different types of training; The levels of training; and Sales training design – the basic model.
Secrets of Success in Selling	Brian Tracy	24:24
The great secret of success is that there are no secrets of success. There are timeless truths that have been known and practiced by the top people in sales, and in every other field, throughout the ages. When you learn and practice the thinking and behavioral skills of the top people in your field, you will soon begin to get the same results they do. There is a series of powerful, practical things that you can do, every single day, that will give you the winning edge in selling and move you to the top of your field. In this course, you learn how to be better in the field of selling than ever before.
Selling Different People Differently	Brian Tracy	26:27
The very best salespeople have developed the art of adjusting their personalities and styles so that they are in harmony with the different kinds of prospects that they meet each day. For you to achieve your maximum potential in selling, you must learn how to get along with a variety of people and sell them the way they want to be sold rather than the way you particularly want to sell. In this course, you will learn how to sell effectively to different kinds of people.
Selling Made Simple	Brian Tracy	26:10
Selling is an art and a science that can be learned by study and practice. Most people who have difficulties achieving success in selling have never been properly trained. Many people who have been selling for many years function on the basis of habit and instinct rather than on the basis of methodology and process. In this course, you will learn the essential elements of successful selling practiced by all top sales professionals everywhere.
Selling On Non-Price Issues	Brian Tracy	26:04
The very best salespeople are those who sell on the basis of value, quality, utility, dependability, service, reputation, and other factors rather than basing the sales conversation on convincing the prospect that you offer the best price. In this course, you will learn some of the key ideas for selling on the real issues that cause people to buy.
Selling to the Opposite Sex	Kerry L. Johnson Ph.D.	35:35
83% of consumer goods in America are purchased by women. 61% of all cars in America are also purchased by this group. No matter what you sell, you are working more with women now than at any other time. Yet you probably don't know how to sell them or the unique way they want to buy. In this program, you will learn: The two things women want most from any salesperson; How men want to buy; and The three things women dislike most when dealing with male salespeople.
Selling Your Price	Dave Yoho	40:00

No single issue confronts salespeople more often than price. It is the root of many objections and delay for negotiation. Price issues come in various forms and disguises. Sometimes they are direct, but often times the language is more subtle, such as “we want to shop around some more.” Professional selling requires that you acknowledge and prepare for price issues. In this course, we will deal with selling your price, as well as understanding and dealing with price objections.

The success of a company is based on many things, but there is no more important job than the job of sales manager. It is the pivotal position in any company; the make or break position. Management is not an exact science; there is not an absolute way to do things that will assure success, but there are several time-tested skills and traits common to most successful sales managers. Your job is to take this information and apply it to your work environment. Course objectives: The five key differences between selling and sales management; The seven roles of a sales manager; The differences in selling today versus yesterday; and Three key principles to reaching the top.
The Power Of Listening	Tony Alessandra	41:56
Listening is the key personal development skill! Dr. Alessandra shows your employees how to tap into their communication power by mastering the art of "active" listening. When you finish this program, your employees will have every tool they'll ever need to effectively listen for and alert them to profitable opportunities. Through Dr. Alessandra's CARESS model, your employees will learn how to hear and retain twice as much information leading to increased trust, respect and cooperation. They'll make better, more informed decisions and solve problems faster and more effectively.
The Problem Salesperson	Brian Tracy	19:08
A key executive talent is the ability to recruit, hire, and build a team of effective, competent people. Problem salespeople can sometimes, not only negatively impact their territory contribution, but the contribution of other team members as well. Because individual human beings are so complex, even the very best hiring skills will give you a success rate of only 66 percent. You must be willing to deal with the 33 percent that don't work out. By the end of this course, you will learn: The three types of problem salespeople; How to save problem salespeople; and The process of firing.
The Psychology of Time-Management	Brian Tracy	15:30
How to develop the mind-set of highly effective people. Program your subconscious for maximum efficiency. Develop the attitude of the top producers. Gain complete control of your time and your life. Practice self-discipline easily in the areas where you make the greatest contributions.
The Sales Performance Appraisal	Brian Tracy	18:52
Without feedback, people cannot improve. No feedback is taken more seriously by salespeople than regularly scheduled written performance appraisals. Written feedback is one of the most effective ways to help people improve. You owe it to your people, your company and yourself to do quality performance appraisals. By the end of this course, you will learn: The purpose of performance appraisals; Steps to the performance appraisal process; Twelve things to evaluate in an appraisal; Process elements; and Five key points to remember.
The Sales Plan	Brian Tracy	16:09
Sales quotas are one of your largest responsibilities. They are the standards by which you and your people will be evaluated. They can motivate your people to reach for higher goals and performance or they can demoralize individuals. Improperly handled, assigning of sales quotas can be the source of problems, frustrations and wasted energy. Properly handled, sales quotas can mean superior achievement and highly-motivated salespeople. By the end of this course, you will learn: Four measures of ROTI; Five methods for setting sales targets; What to consider when developing sales plans; and How to measure sales performance.

The Winning Edge In Sales Brian Tracy 23:53

Why are some people more successful than others? This question has been studied for many years. More than four-thousand books have been written and hundreds of training programs have been developed. Tens of thousands of sales calls have been carefully monitored to identify key traits, qualities and behaviors of top salespeople in every industry. In this course, you will learn the critical element that separates the top performers from the average performers in every field.

The Winning Team Brian Tracy 16:10

We have discussed the importance of staffing; the selection and development of quality individuals. We will now focus on bringing those individuals together as a cohesive team. You cannot do it yourself; you must work through others. The impact these others have in accomplishing your goals can be enhanced through the power of synergism. By the end of this course, you will learn: Six key qualities of a winning team; The basic needs of team members; The H.P. model of effectiveness; How to motivate a team; and How to build a team culture.

Thinking Big Brian Tracy 27:01

You cannot control most of the things that happen to you. You can only control your responses to those things. Your goal must, therefore, be to become a master rather than a victim of change. Your goal is to be powerful rather than powerless. In its simplest terms, successful people are more highly-motivated, more focused and more effective thinkers than others. They think bigger and better than the average person. They have higher levels of self-esteem, self-respect and personal pride. The true measures of success are emotional. There are several things that you can do, every day, to expand your mind and your thinking, to increase your levels of self-esteem, self-respect and personal pride.

Three C's Of Success Brian Tracy 26:10

Learn the three C's of success and a formula that is easy to apply. Change today is continuous and unpredictable. Regaining a "sense of control" is vital. Clarity is the key to control. What you will learn: What 25 years of research tells us; How to create a blueprint for your future; Why courage is the foremost of the virtues; and Ten key principles for developing courage.

Time Management for Salespeople Brian Tracy 27:20

After 100 years of research and countless millions of dollars invested in seeking the causes for success and the causes for failure, we have come up with a simple answer. People are highly-paid because they spend their time doing things of high-value. Salespeople who spend every minute of every day focusing on high-value activities, eventually rise to the top of their fields and make a lot of money. Salespeople, even in the best of markets with the best of products, representing the best of companies, who waste their time in low-value activities, seldom accomplish anything of importance. In this course, you will learn some of the fundamental ideas for managing your time and your life.

Time Management Skills Brian Tracy 20:04

Time is the one indispensable, irreplaceable resource of accomplishment. We all have an equal amount of time. It has been said that the truly successful in our society are separated from others because they have elected to use their time differently. Time-management is really life-management. The pay-off for becoming an excellent time-manager is high. One of the most important rules for success is simply to "form good habits and make them your masters." By the end of this course, you will learn: The importance of planning; Seven time-wasters to eliminate; How to be pro-active; and Seven keys to increased productivity.

Time Management to Balance Work and Family Brian Tracy 14:07

Successful people are very clear about what is important to them. They know how to set priorities and concentrate on doing the things that give them the greatest satisfaction and happiness in life. You have two kinds of goals: work and family. Discover what your chief aim in life is, where most of your real happiness comes from, the main source of stress in your life, the key to balancing conflicting responsibilities and the most important thing of all.

Unshakable Optimism Brian Tracy 26:32

The better you feel about yourself and the world around you, the happier and more cheerful you will be. The more positive a person you are, the more people will be willing to help you in everything you want to do. The most successful people at every level of society are those who are liked and respected by the greatest number of other people. By deliberately doing and saying the things, every day, that will make you feel better about yourself, you will improve every aspect of your life. In this session, you will learn how to become an optimist in a world of continual challenges, difficulties and setbacks.
